How can residents contribute to creating a multicultural society?

Japanese residents can:
- Say hello to people as the first step!
- An everyday greeting will be fine.
- Learn about Japanese culture and lifestyle.
- Learn Japanese.
- Join the neighborhood association (jichikai or chonaikai).

Foreign residents can:
- Say hello to foreign residents as the first step!
- An everyday greeting will be fine.
- Learn about foreign cultures and lifestyles.
- Invite foreign residents to festivals, sports meets and other local events.
- Engage in volunteer activities such as international exchanges and Japanese language lessons.

There are about 110,000 foreign residents living in Saitama Prefecture. The Saitama Prefectural Government is encouraging the development of a community with more vitality where Japanese and foreign residents can live in peace as residents of the same prefecture.

The Saitama Prefectural Government has formulated the Saitama Multicultural Society Promotion Plan! December 2007 to end of Fiscal Year 2011

Why is it important to promote a multicultural society?

Due to the progression of globalization, the population of foreign residents in Saitama Prefecture has increased to approximately 110,000, 1.7 times more than 10 years ago.

Many of these foreign residents cannot receive necessary information because of language difficulties, and they can become isolated in the community due to differences in culture and lifestyle.

To solve these problems, the prefectural government must create an environment where foreign residents can easily learn Japanese, receive counseling on various issues in their life in Saitama, and obtain information. By facilitating the independence of foreign residents, a multicultural society can be realized.

What is a “multicultural society”?

It is a community where people of different nationalities and backgrounds live on equal terms, and display their abilities fully, showing mutual understanding of their cultural differences.
